

Parents: Help Prevent Prescription Drug Misuse

Did You Know?

Many teens believe prescription drugs are a safe way to get high. The good news is, you can help prevent prescription drug misuse.

Commonly Abused Over-the-Counter (OTC) & RX Drugs

- Pain Relievers (Opioid) (e.g. OxyContin, Vicodin)
- Cold medications (e.g. Sudafed, Benadryl)
- Depressants (e.g. Xanax, Valium)
- Stimulants (e.g. Adderall, Ritalin)

Signs of Possible Rx and OTC Abuse

- Unexplained missing medications in your home
- Hyperactivity or sleeplessness (seen with stimulants)
- Slowed movements or reaction time, slurred speech, or disorientation (seen with depressants or pain relievers)
- Sudden weight loss or weight gain
- Excessive sleep
- Change in pupil size

Fast Facts

- Almost 80% of recent heroin users have previously abused opioid RX drugs.¹
- 70% of youth who abuse Rx drugs get them from family and friends.
- Physical dependence can result from use for more than a few days.²

What YOU Can Do

TALK To Your Kids

- Have age-appropriate discussions about the dangers of taking Rx and OTC medications
- Talk about the medications you take and their purpose
- Use current events to start a conversation
- Look your child in the eye (note if change in pupil size)

KNOW What Medications You Have

- Keep a list of your medications
- Be aware of how many pills are in each bottle

SECURE Your Medications

- Store them in a locked cabinet or drawer.
TIP: Childproof lock boxes are available at hardware and big box stores

DISPOSE Unused Medications

- Drop-off unused medications 24/7 at Greenwich Police Dept Medication Drop Box at 11 Bruce Place
